We offer no apology, and none is necess We offer no apology, and none is necessary, for the large amount of space devoted this week to the public memorial observances held at the town hall last Monday. The consistence was one when a solemn hush seemed to fall on the whole community and the dense ground which gathered at the hall listened with a reverent silence which was in itself one of the most impressive features of the day. The services throughout were eminently fitting, and the addresses by Hon. J. M. Tyler and Rev. Dr. Gow were notably worthy the occasion. Sunday was a day scarcely less impressive and we only wish our space allowed us to report as they deserved the pulpit utlerances at the various morning services.

—Last Sunday was a day of rare solemnity in all the Brattleboro churches and for the most part the churches were appropriately draped in recognition of the sad event which was uppermost in the minds of all. At the Episcopal church an American flag was draped over the altar, a Knight Templar banner bung over the chancel with heavy drapings, and mourning emblems were placed on the altar rall and on the organ front. —On Sunday morning Rev. Edward Smiley delivered a sermon in memory of our departed President. On Monday afternoon a union service was held in the town hall, when Revs. Wight, Harlow and Smiley paid each a tender tribute to President Garfield. The singing was led by Mr. Kidder, and was of a superior character. A large audience was present. The platform was appropriately draped in mourning.

Memorial day was very generally observed in this place by suspension of labor and closing of places of business. At 2 o'clock r. M. appropriate services were held at the Methodist church, consisting of seripture reading and devotional exercises by the pastor. Rev. R. S. Cook, followed by appropriate remarks from Rev. N. D. Sherman, Rev. M. B. Blahop, Rev. S. Atherton, Faxon L. Bowen and C. M. Russell. The latter spoke at some length upon the exalted character of the dead President, his example and achievements, and the lessons to be derived from his life and tragic death. The exercises were interspersed with suitable vocal inusio under the charge of E. J. Bullock, and the whole service was eminently appropriate and impressive.

—Very interesting memorial exercises were held in the Baptist church last Sunday afternoon. A large flag tastefully draped with the emblems of mourning was suspended behind the desk. In the centre of the flag, in large black letters, was the name "tharfield," surrounded by black and white orape intertwined, and below this a portrait of Garfield imbedded in a cross of moss and immortelles, the work of Mrs. Dr. Stafford. Upon the table in front of the desk was a larger portrait of Garfield upon a dark background, also surrounded by black and white crape intertwined, the work of Mrs. H. C. Millington. An excellent memorial sermon was selivered surrounded by black and white crape intertwined, the work of Mrs. H. C. Millington. An excellent memorial sermon was delivered by Rev. O. Smith of Wilmington, and a deep feeling of solemnity and sadness pervaded the whole congregation, all seeming to feel that they had met to mourn for one who was a friend to each; and when the anthem entitied "The President's Grave" was read by H. C. Millington in a voice husky with emotion, and afterward sung by the choir, the thought that our beloved President had left us forever assumed to fill the mind of each one present and many eyes filled with tears. Hemarks were made by H. C. Millington. C. Baker, Dr. Gillette, L. P. Mowry and lawyers Hix, Temple and Briggs. All that was said showed a unity of sentiment in regard to the grand and noble character of James A. Garfield; and when Dr. Gillette, who in his long life of nearly four-score years has studied the lives of our presidents carefully, said in a voice so full of emotion that he could hardly speak, that he believed that James A. Garfield came to his high office the best equipped in every respect to perform its daties of any one who ever held the office, all felt that his opinion was right. Pather Mowry said that Garfield, when a student at Williams, boarded in his family, and that then, as ever afterwards, his deportment was that of a gentleman, a scholar and a Christian. All went to their homes feeling that the nation is better and stronger for having before it the life and example of such a man as Garfield, and that by his death the North and the South, the East and the West, are brought into closer fellowship with each other, and, in those now imfortal works of our dead President, that, although the President is dead, "God reigns and the government at Washington still lives."

—Last Sunday Rev. T. M. Butler preached upon the lessons to be learned by the life and death of the late President. The church was appropriately draped in mourning, and the services, beside being impressive, were well calculated to inspire noble ambitions in the minds of the young. Union services were held in the Congregational church Monday at 1 o'clock, the services being conducted by the pastor of the church aided by the pastor of the Bantist church. The heavy drapery and l o'clock, the services being conducted by the pastor of the Baptist church. The heavy drapery and the tasteful display of bouquets of white flowers gave the church an appearance of solemnity and impressiveness which was intensified by the mournful look of every countensance. Almost every inch of sitting room was occupied by those anxious to pay their last token of respect to the martyred President. The discourse by Rev. Geo. Perter and the remarks by Rev. T. M. Butler were characterized by noble and patriotic sentiments eulogistic of the distinguished dead, with earnest appeals to the young to learn lessons of true Christian greatness from the life and death of the nation's honored martyr. At the close of the services a procession was formed under the direction of Col. Franklin and Leau. Scott and marched to the graves of deceased soldiers, where the many flowers arranged in beautiful bouquets and spontaneously brought as an offering, were placed upon the graves of the comrades in arms of the deceased President. The places of business and pest office were draped in mourning and closed during the services.

THE JAMAICA FAIR.

The people of Jamaica had a fine day for their annual fair on Wednesday, the shower which came up during the afternoon being welcome, rather than otherwise, as serving to relieve for the time being the intense heat of the day. Throngs of people poured into the village from all directions during the whole morning, the attendance being not less than 2000. Two leaded cars came from London-derry and three or four more from the South, 73 Jamaica tickets having been sold from West Townshend alone. Owing to the inroads which stock-buyers have made in the town during the past year the stock on exhibition was less in quantity than in some years previous. South Hill sent in a team of 14 yokes of oxen, and the whole number of yokes on the ground was about 25. Daniel Farnum showed three pairs of fine calvas and A. S. Torrey a pen of two good cows and a 2-year-old bull. J. C. Daggett had a pen of sheep, one of which, only 14 months old, weighed 155 pounds. David Eddy showed a pair of yearing Southdowns out of the Billings flock at Woodstock which were as landsome animals as one could wish to see, in the same pen was an extra fine lamb own. handsome animals as one could wish to see.
In the same pen was an extra fine lamb owned by Eddy & Ruby. In poultry the leading feature was D. Eddy's breeding pen of choice Buff Cochins.

The "floral hall" exhibits were shown in Buff Cochina.

The "floral hall" exhibits were shown in the town hall and were highly creditable in their character and variety. Perhaps the most elegant article shown was Mrs. J. A. Butler's silk bed quilt. Mrs. Revile Howard exhibited, among other articles, a defulymade silk sofa pillow and a pair of embroidered slippers. Mrs. S. P. Goddard had a handsome piece of table drapery in outline stitch, and Miss Carrie M. Colburn some beautiful hand work lace. Finely wrought articles of ladies' underwear were shown by Misses M. A. Roberts, Abbis E. Wells, Emma M. Howe, and S. R. Underwood. In the fruit department D. Eddy, had a fine display of 26 varieties of winter apples and two of pears. Seneca Howe showed 3 or 4 varieties of apples and G. M. Ruby some hand. some Warren apples. A. J. Parker showed several varieties of grapes and pears. The most unique feature in the fruit display was a cluster of figs and leaves grown by Wm. H. Thompson of Townshend. J. C. Robinson showed "Longfellow" corn which must have been true to name, the cars measuring 14 inches in length. D. Eddy had a handsome trace of Holden seed corn. As choice a can of maple sugar as we ever saw was exhibited by A. F. Allen. Two samples of wheat bread made by John Herrie, baker at the Vermont Asylum, attracted universal attention from housewives and others. The bread was white and light and sweet—the perfection of good bread, in fact, and spoke volumes for Mr. Berrie's skill as a baker, as well as for the quality of food furnished the asylum inmates. G. W. Holton exhibited his closing wash-bench which he manufactures at Janaica. C. W. Stewart was on hand with three Estey organs in legant styles. Sewing machines were represented by the "White" shown by Upham of Bellows Falls, the "Royal St. John" shown by Landman of So. Londonderry, and the "New Home" by Dunkles of Brattleboro. Mr. Dunkles seemed to have no difficulty in drawing and holding the attention of the ladies to the wide variety of work done on the New Home, one machine running on the finest cotton and linen work, while another showed its capabilities in subroidering in colored silks. There would seem to be no end to the adaptability of the machine, work done on the spot showing it to sew readily through three pieces of stout harness leather and to then drop to tissue paper or cetton cloth without change of tension or of needle. The strength of the machine was shown by its sawing through a pile of five thicknesses of sheet lead, three of leather and one of cloth. The simplicity of the machine was shown by its sawing through a pile of five thicknesses of sheet lead, three of leather and one of cloth. The simplicity of the machine is in marked contrast to the complicated gearing of the machines in use 10 years ago.

The annual fall match for the Hooker and club meduls came off yesterday at the Vernon range, A. W. Nichols taking the Hooker medal with a fine score of 146, and W. H. Childs the silver medal with a score of 44 at two hundred yards off hand. The weather was good and the day favorable, with the exception of a troublesome "fish-tail" wind from the rear. Following are the scores for the Hooker medal.

THE VALUE OF A BRARD.

The well-known case of George Cox of Rutland against George N. Eayres, Superintendant of the House of Correction, to recover damages for the beard of the plaintiff, which was cut off by order of Eayres, has been devoided in the county court in favor of Cox, damages being placed at $220.61. Gox kept a sistatiory missance at Rutland, was indicted, convicted and sentenced to the House of Correction with the option of a fine. He refused to pay the fine and was committed, the prisoner waiving the 24 hours allowed by law in which to pay his fine. He were a heavy beard and when told that he must be shaved, protested, withdraw his waiver of 24 hours and told the officer he would pay his fine and begged them to wait until he could send for his friends who would pay his fine. But the barber paid no attention, and cut his beard off. In consequence of it Cox took a very violent cold and came near dying. He was released in a few days, his friends paying his fine. Suit for damages was brought. On the first trial the verdict was for the defendant. The Supreme Court reversed this and on a second trial the result is as above. THE VALUE OF A BEARD. fendant.
